The World Wide Web (WWW or Web) is made up of a system of computer network servers that communicate with one another through specialized codes and support a host of specialized documents…